My Dear Mr. Stone: The samples that you have sent The Inland Printer for comment have proven so interesting to me that I am anxious to have you tell us how well your printing advertising has paid you and how you make it pay; how you get your circulars out; how often you send them; and if you write all your matter yourself or do you have it done outside. Will you also tell us how you get at the business man; by that I mean what special inducements do you present to him for trade-winning.

I'd like to have your letter for use in my department of the paper for August, so let me have it by June 30th.

I hope trade is good with you, and that I may have the pleasure of hearing from you soon.

I am yours,

"Musgrove," of Inland Printer, Chicago.

Any questions you'd like to ask, do so; I might help you.

The following is from "The Inland Printer," the leading printers' journal of the country:

"Down in Roanoke, Virginia, there is one of the largest printing establishments in the South, and one of the most progressive and up-to-date in the business anywhere, The Stone Printing and Manufacturing Company. Mr. Edw. L. Stone, the head of the company, and the one from whom emanates the majority of the advertising ideas, writes me as follows about his advertising:

'I believe advertising to be almost as necessary in the conduct of a printing establishment as is the printing press itself. The kind of advertising, or the method employed, is the point that needs the most consideration.

'The writer has always believed in a certain amount of newspaper advertising, and has carried two inches across double, at the top of the column, next to local reading matter, same position, in our morning daily for the past eight years. This is changed regularly, every week-the advertisement being set up in our job department, in nobby style, stereotyped, and the plate sent to the newspaper. We thus attend to our own display, have the use of all the late style type, borders, etc., and find that this method encourages the systematic changing of the advertisement.

'Of course, the first thing is to have something to advertise. Advertising will not be beneficial for any length of time if the claims and representations are not as advertised.

'We claim to be the largest and best equipped printing office in the State-with possibly two exceptions; they may be larger, but are really no better equipped. All of our machinery is modern-our appliances labor-saving, etc. We have lots of type and other facilities necessary for quick work-and we tell our friends (and enemies) about them.

'It is, of course, necessary that the quality of our printing be right, and our prices right, and our promises kept.

'We inclose a little advertising slip in each letter we send out and in each package we deliver. 'We never mention a price in our newspaper advertising, and seldom in our slip advertising. Our experience is that when a man sees a good job of printing he remembers who did it-he does not ask what it cost. We mean, for example, suppose a handsome programme is gotten out for some public entertainment, and the programme is commented upon. On all sides we will hear: "Stone, that's a nice programme you printed for the Flower Show." When some other entertainment is to be given they remember that we printed the other programme, and come to us.

Then we take care of the rest. 'We pay especial attention to our proofreading-and it's a winning card with schools, colleges, universities, lawyers, etc.

'And we tell the people about it.

'Our city has a population of about 22,000-we employ about sixty-five people, occupy three floors, 60 by 100 feet, well lighted and heated, fitted with gas and electric light, gas and electric power, and electric bells, dumb waiters and speaking tubes to all departments. Our people have a metropolitan printing office at their own doors.

'And we tell them about it.

'We recently undertook to complete in two weeks an edition of 10,000 copies of an 180-page catalogue. Our customer doubted our ability to do so. A friend who had seen some of our quick work, in the shape of law briefs, told the customer if we said we would do it, they could count on it being done. We had them begging us for time.

'And we told the public about it.

' We endeavor not to promise more than we can perform-but, after we promise it, we leave no stone unturned to keep our promise. We telegraph for paper to come by express; we work at night-all night, may be; put the job on two presses, or six, if

'And then we tell the people about it.

'We keep quite a lot of samples of our printed work, with circular price list, always ready for answering inquiries. We send out a large calendar at first of the year, and calendars on blotters each month.

"We never "let up." 'We make it a rule to answer all letters courteously and fully. If a quotation is asked on one thing, and we can suggest something better, or perhaps more economical, we do so.

"We never "talk about" a competitor. We blow our own horn, and find it keeps us busy.

'I have tried to answer your questions, and hope I have done so satisfactorily.

'I might add that I have active charge of the business; am practical printer; write all the advertisements; keep in touch with almost every job, suggesting the change of a line here and there; believe in giving my force good tools to work with; have ried and true lieutenants at the head of the departments, who take oride in the good name of the establishment, etc.

'I believe in paying good wages and exacting good service.

'If I can give you any further information let me know.'

"There are lots of good points in that letter. You will notice Mr. Stone says, 'we never let up.' Much of the sucess of Mr. Stone's advertising lies in that. There is no 'off eason' for Mr. Stone, because he always keeps at his people. Ir. Stone's letter can be read with a great deal of profit, because it is the testimony of a practical advertising business man who has the courage of his convictions and the power to carry them out fully and completely."

CURRENT MISCELLANY.

Removing old paint from metal surfaces in structural steel and iron work, such as bridges and the like, previous to repainting, involves an expenditure of time and money quite beyond the ideas of the uninformed. Whether the sand blast, says Kuhlow's German Trade Review, which is so efficient in cleaning castings, would perform satisfactorily in this direction is therefore a question of considerable economic in-terest. Whatever experiment has thus far been made has shown that when the paint is reasonably new and the oil is in a slightly elastic state it is exceedingly difficult to remove it by sand blast, though later, when the oil has become more oxidized from longer exposure to the air, it yields more readily to the attack of the process. Paint there fore which is old enough to warrant its removal and replacing by a fresh coat would probably give way before the sand grains in an encouraging manner. An instance in point is where the sand blast was used to clean between decks of a cattle steamer, which was in an exceedingly bad condition, with many coats of old paint on the iron work. Now, the results were highly satisfactory as to the quality of the work done, but the time consumed was excessive. The air pressure used was, however, only about ten pounds per square inch, making it reasonable to suppose, therefore, that if from 40 to 50 pounds pres-sure had been used the results might have been satisfactory in point of quality and economy of work.

Unfulfilled Prophecies.

An interesting thing in Mr. Glad-stone's speech at the opening of the Victoria bridge over the Dee was his recollection of an unfulfilled prophecy as to the future of railways. A "shrewd man" of his acquaintance had worked out the probabilities in this way: Common people will travel by the railway, but the rich will never use it. The latter will, therefore, be left alone and unprotected on the highroad, and there will be a great increase of highwaymen, who will cut all their throats

When will somebody write a history of unfulfilled prophecies in politics and social life? It is the great want of the time. The venerable Colonel Sibthorp denounced the great exhibition of 1851 as an enterprise that would prove to be the wooden horse of English independence. The tyrants of the continent, he said, would send over their soldiers disguised as tourists, and one fine morning we should all wake up to find them in possession of the Tower of London. There is often more rash prophecy in parliament in a single session than in Zadkiel, Old Moore and all the rest of them in a decade.—London Tit-Bits.

A Seat on the Platform.

During the ten years he was in Australia as bishop of Melbourne Dr. Moorhouse, the present bishop of Manchester, made himself very popular by his geniality, tolerance and common sense. One night the bishop was about to lecture in a little township perched on a plateau in the Australian Alps.

The Itall was packed, but a young bushman, attired in a striped shirt and moleskin trousers and wearing a flaming red comforter, was determined to push his way to the front. He thought he saw a vacant seat on the platform and made for it.

"Would you mind shoving up a bit, missus?" he said to a quiet, pleasant looking lady.

"No, no, you mustn't sit there," interposed a local clergyman. "That's the bishop's wife."
"Nonsense,"

"Nonsense," said the bishop, who had overheard the remark. "Squeeze up a bit, Mary."
Mrs. Moorhouse laughingly obeyed, and the young bushman in many colored attire sat by the side of the bishop's wife throughout the lecture. — Youth's

A Wonderful Pump.

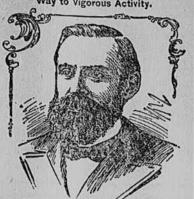

A pump built for the stamp mills of the Calumet and Hecla company is considered one of the most marvelous pieces of mechanism ever put together. Without crowding in the least and with as much apparent case as one would work an ordinary cistern pump this great engine delivers 2,500,000 gallons of water in 24 consecutive hours and does this continuously. It is almost noiseless, so perfect is the adjustment. Indeed persons standing just outside of the building can scarcely hear its beating. Standing inside by the great pit from which the water is drawn, almost the only sound is the inrush of the water as the pump lifts more than 1,000 gallons at every stroke. This immense piece of machinery is engaged in supply ing water to the works, where 5,000 tons per day of conglomerate rock are pulverized into sand fine enough to be swept away by the rush of water. The nicety of adjustment may be imagined from the fact that the current of water lifts and sweeps away the sand, but does not disturb the copper that settles at the bottom of the pans.—New York Ledger.

A Huysvrouw of New Amsterdam.

The huysvrouw was usually not only careful and diligent in the business of caring and providing for her frequently very large household, including depend-She was also in general both a God revering and a merry soul, attending to all her Christian duties as then understood, and also fond of the pleasures as well as the comforts of life. One reason for building the chimney stack in the centers of the Codwise and Evertson houses is said to have been to provide for "dancing around the chimney. In New Amsterdam, says tradition, the families of the better class met at one another's house almost every weekday evening, save during the hottest weather, for purposes of amusement. Hearty, healthy and happy people they seem to have been, doing as much good and as little ill as may be in an imperfect world and leaving to their descendants fine examples of family affection, pro-Auctive industry, broad charity and contentment. - Harper's Bazar.
